Saturday, April 23, 2005

10:00 AM — 12:00PM

Bertha Knight Landes Room

City Hall, 1st Floor, 600 Fourth Avenue

(Coffee available at 9:30AM)

Neighbors, shoppers, small-business owners and property owners citywide may be impacted by significant changes to the land use code proposed by the Mayor's office, under the umbrella Neighborhood Business District Strategy. How do these proposed changes affect you?

The proposal includes new pedestrian overlay zones in parts of six neighborhoods: Admiral, Columbia City, Eastlake, Lake City, Madison-Miller, and Greenwood-Phinney. The proposal includes interest in improving the quality and viability of neighborhood business districts.

The issues will be framed in a short panel discussion followed by an open public discussion. Panelists will represent, residential, small business owner, regulatory and commercial developer perspectives.

PANELISTS:

- Tom Eanes, Member of the Seattle Planning Commission
- Carol Eychaner, Eastlake neighborhood activist
- Bruce Lorig, principal of Lorig Associates, developer of commercial and residential projects
- Jeanne Barwick, President of Greenwood-Phinney Chamber of Commerce and owner of Mae's Café
- Lish Whitson, Senior Planner-Department of Planning and Development, City of Seattle

The City Neighborhood Council and other civic organizations have joined with City Councilmember Peter Steinbrueck, Chair of Council's Urban Development and Planning Committee to discuss the proposed changes. For information about the Mayor's proposal visit:
